Defendant.

On Thursday, September 10, 2009, United States Magistrate Judge James Orenstein ordered that the defendant Philip Barry be released from custody pursuant to a $500,000 unsecured bond that was co-signed by one of Barry's relatives. Federal law provides that crime victims have the right to "reasonable, accurate, and timely notice of any public court proceeding" and the right to "be reasonably heard at any public proceeding" involving bail. Accordingly, any victims associated with the above-referenced case had the right to be heard at the two detention hearings held thus far in this case, and indeed some victims have appeared and exercised that right. Judge Orenstein indicated that any victim who did not receive advance notice of the September 10 detention hearing has a right to be heard on the issue of whether Judge Orenstein should reconsider his order.
